LEADERSHIP AND COMMUNICATION THROUGH INTERNAL MARKETING

Angela-Eliza Micu, Adrian Micu, Irina Susanu, Sofia Totolici

“Dunarea de Jos” University of Galati, Department of Management and Marketing, Romania

 angelaelizamicu@yahoo.com

ABSTRACT

Managers act like champions of knowledge and learning. The implementation of knowledge management is an incremental process. The point raised by many theorists, that “employees are a company’s first service market”, is an assumption which shows that the first market of an organization is the market of its employees.

Also, internal marketing has a significant impact on knowledge management in an organization.

Company employees do not need the organization to develop complicated internal marketing programs to make a difference.

KEYWORDS: employees, market, organization, internal management, knowledge, communication, leadership.

REFERENCES